Almost All Small TownsBy Big TMacShould have been titled "35 Affordable SMALL Waterfront Towns." Only a few medium or large towns listed - ' most cities were under 50,000 population.

Living near the water is a lifelong dream for many people. So when retirement time arrives, moving to a lakeside town or seaside community is a natural inclination. The trick is to find a place to retire near the water that is reasonably priced. Here we have 35 towns that sit next to a lake, have a lake within their boundaries or are along a river or seacoast. They have a cost of living that meets the national average or is below the national average. They also have a crime rate that is equal to or below the national rate. No place is perfect, however, so we point out each towns potential drawbacks. We also look at population, climate, home prices, percentage of residents age 45 or better, medical facilities, public transportation, crime rates, political leanings and more.

About the AuthorKris Kelley lives in beautiful Colorado has been finding and reviewing great places to retire since 2006. She is an avid traveler, always looking for that hidden gem of a town, whether it be along an ocean, in a desert or on a mountaintop. She believes that retirement is just the next phase and should bring fulfillment and a sense of purpose. And that phase and sense of purpose should happen in the perfect retirement town.
