Fifty years of building a state of wars and songs and everything in between. In 50 Faces of Israel, award-winning photographer David Katz delves into the harsh contrasts and bright colors of Israel and emerges with a superb collection of subtly moving pictures. Divided into chapters such as City Life, The Wall, Life in Uniform and Israel at Play, this collection of photographs about people like the Ethiopian soldier ready to fight for Israel, the Hasidic family rafting on the Jordan River or the Jewish cowboy in the Golan Heights. With over 140 pages of color photos, and a unique introduction by Israel's President, Ezer Weizman, 50 Faces of Israel makes a wonderful gift, while it reminds us why 50 years of statehood is worth celebrating.

A poignant and touching reminder of the many aspects of Israel the people, the culture, its growth. -- Niki Austin The London Jewish News There are hundreds perhaps thousands of books about Israel Few actually show the melting pot of people who live in the country. David Katz has broken the mold with a magnificent panorama of pictures showing the people who live in Israel -- Manny Robinson, Essex Jewish News [50 Faces] delves behind the headlines to celebrate the diversity of the modern-day children of Israel. -- The Jewish Chronicle About the Author Originally an award-winning sports photographer, David Katz continues to find meaningful ways to evoke emotions and tell stories. His latest opportunity was in Israel, where for over three years he worked to portray the unparalleled diversity of the Jewish State. The result of his heartfelt labor is 50 Faces of Israel. David currently lives and works in England.
