Sarah Outen : A Dip in the Ocean: Rowing Solo Across the Indian before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised A Dip in the Ocean: Rowing Solo Across the Indian:

She succeeded, becoming the first woman to do so, along with being the youngest. Her prose is immediate and invites you to be right along with her, from the decision to do it in the first place to the deep grief of the sudden loss of her father before the journey begins. You'll feel as if you rowed the entire thing right along with her. I appreciated her focus on details--what her daily routine was like, how much she loved seeing the albatrosses who passed by, and her inability to ration her chocolate. You can't help but admire her tenacity. 1 of 1 people found the following review helpful. Couldn't Put it Down By G. Lockwood Ok so I am a Sarah Outen groupie and have been following her London to London adventure for years. Finally got the kindle version of this book and was not disappointed. The narrative is clean and the insights are remarkable. Strongly recommend this book to anyone who has an adventurers heart. 1 of 1 people found the following review helpful. A lovely tale By Deborah Thornton This book is an easy read and had me in tears in the beginning. Although the subject matter is, obviously, not all that exciting, somehow Sarah manages to keep the reader engaged throughout the entire journey.

Four-thousand miles of unpredictable ocean, 500 chocolate bars, 124 days of physical exertion, three Guinness World Records, and one incredible journey

"A book to stroke your adventurous streak . . . gripping." National Geographic Traveller
