VahidReza Amirkhani is simply the best persian author for now... he knows exactly which word to use at which point and he knows how to make sweet jokes at the point where you just don't expect it. So let yourself enjoy from this gorgeous book.

In 2009, Reza Amirkhani went from Mashhad to Afghanistan, with his wife and son. He went to Afghanistan by chance, but fell in love with the lands magical familiarity and difference, at the same time. Wandering about in neighbors lands provided a chance for Amirkhani to take a second look at Iran; its new adventures and the future to come. This book is one of Amirkhanis best-selling titles. The anticipations for its release were exceptionally sensational. His wise choice of words and phrases, warm prose on one hand, and witty look over the similarities and differences between Iran and Afghanistan, on the other, have turned this title into a bestseller. Amirkhani always tries to keep a neutral position, and this is why his audience, who come from different backgrounds of society, trust him.

About the AuthorIranian novelist, Reza Amirkhani, was born in Tehran in 1973. His first book was during his high school years at Allameh Helli, but his profession as a writer started several years later after graduating from Sharif University. He is mostly known for the novel "Man-e Ooh" (Persian: ). Alongside his novels, he writes articles and commentaries on contemporary social and cultural issues in Iran.
