Great resource full of trail historyBy William BraggTo the one star reviewer--Why would you ruin a book's reputation when it was obviously your mistake for ordering a book that had nothing to do with what you were looking for? Kind of like ordering a black-and-white movie and complaining that you wanted a color movie. I found the book to be informative, entertaining, and full of wonderful bits of Appalachian Trail history. Things like--who the early movers and shakers of the trail were, how hard they worked to get the trail built, what it took--physically and mentally--to work on the trail, etc. The AT has been relocated many times and this book details all of the places it used to go. A great book for anyone even slightly interested in the trail.0 of 14 people found the following review helpful. not helpfulBy charlen robinowichWanted maps..just a historic book. Not helpful for hiking.

Predating the Great Smoky Mountains National Park and the Blue Ridge Parkway, the Appalachian Trail was established in the 1920s. Yet even after volunteers had begun the pathway's construction, its southern terminus was still undetermined. The more than 200 vintage photographs of Images of America: Along the Appalachian Trail: Georgia, North Carolina, and Tennessee have been culled from the Appalachian Trail Conservancy, National Park Service, local trail maintaining clubs, state archives, and historical societies. They illustrate the sweat, toil, and dedication that went into building the trail over some of Eastern America's highest and most rugged terrain. Also chronicled are the people who lived along the trail's route, those who volunteered to physically build it or lobby for its creation, and the many relocations that have moved the pathway to optimal locations.

About the Author Author Leonard M. Adkins has hiked the entire Appalachian Trail five times and is the author of 17 books about the outdoors and travel, including five concerning the trail. He has aided the Appalachian Trail Conservancy in protecting rare and endangered plants by being a Natural Heritage monitor and a ridge runner. He has also been on the Roanoke Appalachian Trail Club's board of directors and a volunteer maintainer of a trail section near McAfee Knob.
