This small group of men tracing the path of Nuflo de Chavez' 1557 exploration of Bolivia seem unprepared for the challenges of the journey, but they learn much along the way and survive. The author wrestles an anaconda, is stalked by a jaguar ("tiger"), and later must shoot a jaguar, among other heart-pounding adventures. Formidale!By John Barrett RoseThis account of a six month trek through the Bolivian jungle is a story that thrills and astonishes. It stands the test of time for no mere novel could ever match the remarkable account of brave men making a journey of exploration through what was perhaps then the nastiest and most dangerous terrain on this earth.
