various hangouts where we kids spent most of our time. While it focuses on east Long Beach, there is nice coverage of the downtown area as well. Also very educational as well, of all the times we ate at the Golden Lantern I had no idea that there was a dining room in there. As others have mentioned, I do wish there were more photos in the book. And it goes a bit too heavy into the music scene for my taste. But it brings back a lot of fond and not so fond memories of growing up there. Makes me long for grabbing a hot dog at Woolworths after perusing the latest records at the Musical Jewel Box. 2 of 2 people found the following review helpful. This great book has been my "go to" for a gift. By Linda Kay Beaman Many of my friends from Long Beach are turning Seventy. This great book has been my "go to" for a gift! Everyone who I've given it to, loves it! 2 of 2 people found the following review helpful. Lakewood area will love this book. By Laurie L Every baby boomer who grew up in the Long Beach, Lakewood area will love this book. A gift to my husband for Christmas, but before we left for dinner with relatives, I had read almost the entire book. So much for to remember yesteryears.

How quickly the memories fade of local and favorite hangouts that once helped define Long Beach. In this collection, Tim Grobaty remembers growing up in the fast-growing new neighborhoods of East Long Beach, the beloved places downtown that were part of the city's mid-twentieth-century fabric and a few obscure spots in the margins. Long Beach's memory lane includes the dearly departed restaurants the Golden Lantern in Los Altos and Rusty's in the Wrigley District, the Circle and Los Altos Drive-Ins, great concerts of the 1970s in the arena and auditorium and the shoppers' paradises of Uncle Al's Toy Korral in the Plaza and Buffum's downtown.
