Rodger French : Happy To Be Here - Vol. 3: Bulletins From Buenos Aires (Volume 3) before purchasing it in order to gauge whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Happy To Be Here - Vol. 3: Bulletins From Buenos Aires (Volume 3):

Rodger French is a professional musician happily married to a U.S. Foreign Service Officer. Since 2006, he has been reporting on his travels via a series of email postings. Unexpectedly, these modest essays have proven to be quite popular and many of his regular readers have clamoured... well, asked politely if they, the essays, might be published in book form. Happy To Be Here, Vol. 3: Bulletins From Buenos Aires is the third in a series, preceded by Vol. 1: Greetings From Ghana and Vol. 2: Postings From Pretoria. Next up (eventually): Vol. 4: Messages From Myanmar. Rodger has a somewhat unique perspective, being an expat musician, occasional U.S. Embassy employee, and enthusiastic traveler. His postings have been described by discerning readers as "great stuff", "wonderful to read", and "surprisingly well-written."

About the Author Rodger French is an accomplished accordionist, percussionist, and juggler. Over the course of several decades, he has served as a theatre musical director, orchestra musician, Vaudeville entertainer, and clowning instructor. Additionally, he has two CDs of solo accordion selections to his credit: "Main Squeeze" and "Main Squeeze Deux." Since 2006, Rodger has traveled with his wife, a U.S. Foreign Service Officer, to overseas assignments in Ghana, South Africa, Argentina, and, currently, Myanmar. In addition to maintaining his musical career, he has also worked in the American Embassy at each post. This lifestyle has given him opportunities to travel extensively and then write about it. Rodger considers himself a very fortunate fellow and really is happy to be here.
