About the Author Gleyse de Frana Silva wishes she could live in a world where we pay no taxes and we travel for free to anywhere we want. Teleporting would be the most ideal way to travel, according to her. But until this world becomes a reality, Gleyse prefers to relish in writing and talking about Rio de Janeiro, the first city-theme of the first of its series called: Hi-Lo Travel. Gleyse shares her insights, experiences and research on getting to know Rio on two budgets, high and low. Born and raised in Brazil, this Brazilian-Canadian writer, started her professional career in finance but soon realized her true passion was for journalism and comedy (yes, comedy). The mix of these three backgrounds compelled her to dig deep to research and present options to travelers so that they can explore their destination of choice, either on a tight budget or on a care-free budget. She surveyed hundreds of travelers from all walks of life focusing on their wants and needs. Her finance background and research helped her find the best bang for the buck and her love for journalism and comedy allowed her to describe Rio in a very unique and entertaining way.
