By Antoine Husseini
I am Lebanese but have been studying and living outside Lebanon for 35 years. Every year I come back to visit relatives and to rediscover my country. This book has helped me and my family to appreciate Lebanon's history and most beautiful and interesting spots. On many occasions we followed the the routes described in the book and enjoyed the back ground information.

I would have never visited many of those places described, if it was not for this great book. I have given this book to many of our friends who wanted to know more about Lebanon and for all of them it was an eye opener.

Lebanon, an ancient land re-inventing itself once again in the aftermath of civil war, has much to offer to the inquisitive traveller. At the crossroads of empires, commerce, civilizations and world religions, you cannot go far in the country without discovering any number of historical monuments. Lebanon also boasts many areas of great natural beauty. Frank and Laure Skeels know the Lebanon well. Their detailed, informative book offers you an all-encompassing array of 48 walks of varying length, fanning out from Beirut, itself developing into a rich mine of attractions.
