3 of 3 people found the following review helpful. It was useless to us By RBI bought an assortment of brand of maps for our three week European trip. The popout design is a nice feature, but the map itself is just about impossible to read. It was so bad that we threw it in the garbage and used the free map from the hotel, instead. 1 of 1 people found the following review helpful. but I have learned that the free/locally available maps are always more than sufficient and actually have better detail. I do like the way this map folds small and is waterproof. 0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. Not really all that useful. Too small and not enough detail By LStaudinger Not really all that useful. Too small and not enough detail.

About the Author Having spotted a need to cure what he calls 'Map Stress Syndrome' after watching numerous tourists around the City of Bath, England, battling with oversized maps, founder Derek Dacey recalled the invaluable miniature charts he used during his days as a commercial pilot. Aiming to bring this level of usability to the city map market, a small team of designers was recruited to realise what would soon become the PopOut. 1993 saw the release of the first ever PopOut Map Bath, which was sold in the gift and souvenir trade across the city. Hot on the heels of this initial success, a research trip to the USA culminated in a redesigned layout, combining strong photo images, high quality printing and laminated covers standards which are still adhered to today. That research trip also saw the birth of the first US destinations covered in the PopOut range Boston, NYC, Philadelphia and Washington DC. Launched in the new style in the US they enjoyed instant success in the gift and souvenir trade.
