Not quite sure what National Geographic was thinking when they printed this map! I understand this is the 'White Mountains' map but why would you place THE most important feature (The Presidential Range) as an inset and split the range between two sides of the map????!!!!!! Very poor cartography choice, obviously produced by people that don't hike!!! Other than that, I just completed the Adirondack 46'ers and used a NG map the entire time and it held up great and the map information was very accurate...

This map has more campgrounds marked, and some other info than several of the other local white mountains maps I have. I have labeled campgrounds that aren't very well known and usually not busy which is a huge plus! I don't like the way the trails are marked as well as some of the other WM maps, but they are adequate.

I have had this map for years - it saved our butts when my buddy got hurt up on the presidential ridge in the winter. I was able to use the map to find our location and an alternate way down the mountain to get him to safety.
