Harold Stephens and Albert Podell : Who Needs a Road?: The Story of the Longest and Last Motor Journey Around the World

before purchasing it in order to gauge whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Who Needs a Road?: The Story of the Longest and Last Motor Journey Around the World:

This book is about two men who wanted to drive around the world, to remote corners, to those places where few men have ventured before. They wanted to do it in a four-wheel drive, taking their own camper-trailer with them, to live at the edge of deserts and at the rim of tropical jungles, to drive the highest roads, and the lowest, to be free to make their own choices, and the Trans World Expedition was born. This is their incredible journey. That they did it, and how they did it is their tale told in this exciting book.
