I bought this book when I found out I was pregnant with my first son. This collection of tales was very inspiring--you don't need to give up outdoor adventuring; in fact, taking kids with you will just add to the excitement! Stories in this book cover the full range of ages, from the unborn to chattering toddlers and preschoolers to teenagers on the verge of adulthood. Most fascinating to me was seeing the inner revelations of the authors as parents, learning new wonder from their children.

Wild with Child is an enjoyable read that really brings home the endless variety and range of ways to enjoy outdoor adventures with children of all ages. To quote the introduction, "There are wonders waiting and memories to be made."

Wild with Child is a unique collection of true stories by parents who boldly head out into the wilderness with kids in tow (or in the lead, as the case may be). These stories run the gamut of adventure: winter camping, climbing, spelunking, field research, skiing, llama trekking, fishing, hunting, and searching for pirate treasure with children of all ages. Readers should bundle up before they strike out into the Rocky Mountains with Mark Jenkins, whose idea of quality time with the kids is camping in a snow cave. Leslie Leyland-Fields shares deep gratitude as her brood safely migrates to an Alaskan island by bush plane. Maleesha Speer confides her personal evolution as she awakens to the wonder of her unborn child in bear country. Whether just beginning the course of wild parenting or looking back at the trail they've taken, these writers aren't willing to accept Disneyland as the final frontier. Even the most civilized among them insist that their children grow up feeling grass between their toes and sun on their skin. It's a healthy heritage, giving kids a steady set of bearings, making them strong, and helping them rise to challenges.
