on the cover. The first few chapters are about how travel agents generally work before getting into the nitty-gritty of how to organize your own trips without the help of a travel agent. The advice is practical, and the anecdotes and illustrations are actually pretty funny - for an informational guide it is very easy to read. I saved more than the cost of the book in 'doing-it-myself' and had a lot of fun doing it.

Not confident of booking your own travel online? Feel like your travel agent may be overcharging you for your dream vacation? "You Don't Need a Travel Agent" is probably the book you need in your hands. Never before has the online travel booking process been documented in such meticulous detail - full of interesting anecdotes of my experiences with online booking, my time working as a travel agent and the adventures I have had abroad. THIS STEP-BY-STEP GUIDE COVERS TOPICS SUCH AS How Travel Agencies work Why booking online is cheaper? Travel time (a.k.a why you cannot see a new destination every two days) Visas and entry/exit fees Airline Booking Classes, Fare Rule and Prices TripAdvisor - taken with a pinch of salt The hotel star rating and why it really doesn't matter Travel Insurance With over 50 chapters dedicated to every aspect of booking your own travel, 'You Don't Need a Travel Agent' is the definitive how-to guide to booking your own vacations online. Whether you are a first time traveler or an experienced globetrotter this book will save you time, time, potential marital issues and in the process turn the experience of organizing your travels from one of stress and anxiety to fun and excitement... which is exactly how it should be.

About the Author Luke Goudge didn't get a passport until the age of twenty-five but by the time he had reached thirty he had visited over 30 countries in 4 continents, and touched the hearts of millions of people worldwide Ok, so that last part isn't true but the visiting numerous countries part is. Aside from one or two long-haul flights, Luke booked everything himself. The itinerary, accommodation, Visas, day tours, internal flights, taxi transfers, ferry transfers, camel transfers Everything. Later he would become a travel agent, and shortly after that he stopped working as a travel agent. He has been sourced as a travel tips expert and has been published in Australia's largest syndicated news source www.news.com.au (Secrets of Travel Agents Revealed) Luke still works a 9 to 5 job unfortunately travelling the world doesn't pay the bills. When he is not travelling, Luke resides in Melbourne, Australia.
