humorous glimpse of an oft forgotten event in our nation's history told from the perspective of someone who lived it! Yes, the language and ethnic references are not for the easily offended. But, they truly evoke the time place in an indelible manner. It is a very quick and most enjoyable trip to the earliest days of the "Zone"!!! 2 of 2 people found the following review helpful. My father wrote it! By Patricia F. Sheffield I was offered the Kindle app from for my desktop and immediately asked for "Zone Policeman 88", published in 1913, an eBook offered FREE. I'm now 87 and read it a very long time ago as a youngster, so I didn't remember anything about it.. It's fascinating and also funny! 1 of 1 people found the following review helpful. Good Short History By Carlton O Phelps I spent a few years in Panama and this book is a great way to learn about the area. He sees the Canal with a good eye at what was going to be lost after the Canal was finished. The villages and farms that were flooded by Gatun Lake. Fun read and good way to see the difference between the Zone and Panama.

Harry Alverson Franck (1881-1962) was an American vagabond. He was born in Munger, Michigan. In 1903 he graduated from the University of Michigan. In 1915 he travelled in Mexico and in 1916 he described his experience there in a book entitled Tramping Through Mexico, Guatemala and Honduras: Being the Random Notes of an Incurable Vagabond. He also travelled to such places as Germany, the West Indies, China, Siam, Greece, Alaska and Scandinavia. He wrote about 33 travel books including: A Vagabond Journey Around the World (1910), Three Hoboes in India (1910), Four Months Afoot in Spain (1911), Zone Policeman 88: A Close Range Study of the Panama Canal and its Workers (1913), Vagabonding Down the Andes (1917), Working My Way Around the World (1918), Roaming Through the West Indies (1920), Working North From Patagonia (1921) and Wandering in Northern China (1923).
